PREFACE

THE small contribution towards the history of Suffolk which this volume contains consists mainly of two statistical records of the thirteenth century, relating to the Hundred of Blackbourne. Of these the more important, which, however, for structural reasons has had to be placed at the end of the book, is the detailed assessment of the inhabitants to a tax of one-thirtieth part of their goods granted in 1283, of which the original manuscript is now preserved among the Exchequer records in the Public Record Office, and is referred to as Lay Subsidies, Suffolk, No. $\frac{242}{41}$. This roll consists of 70 skins, large and small, written on one side only, but in several different hands, and is the contemporary enrolment made by the assessors in each township. With two or three exceptions the whole is in good and legible condition, but the tale of the villages is not quite complete, for the returns for Coneyweston and Fakenham Parva are not now to be found with their fellows, and one or two smaller skins referring to portions of other returns are missing.

On this roll the returns are given in narrative form and are very tedious to consult; the information, however, which they contain as a whole throws so much light on the conditions of country life and the dark subject of thirteenth century farming, that I have thought the time not ill spent in transcribing them into such a form that the resulting statistics might be easily accessible to those interested in this period of English history.

In dealing with the returns I have rearranged the items of each entry so as to show the various kinds of produce and livestock in tabular form, substituted Arabic for Roman numerals, and added the totals which are printed at the foot of each column. The sums of the valuations of each individual's goods, which are printed on the right-hand side of the tax lists, are given as they stand in the original, but for the totals, at the foot of these columns of totals, I am responsible. Where, however, this sum has been given in the MS. it is printed below the list, as the original "summa tricesime" (partis) or "tricesimi" (denarii).

In some of the printed tax lists instances occur where no price is given for the young of some animals; it must be understood in these cases that the price is included in that given for the mother.

I have also printed here a return as to land tenure in the Hundred made at a slightly earlier date and taken from a larger return preserved in a Bury Abbey register which represents perhaps all that is left to us of the later "Hundred Rolls" for Suffolk.

The Notes on the various townships, which follow, consist, except where they refer to the tax lists, of the results of a search through the Assize Rolls and Inquisitions post mortem in the Record Office, and other MSS. relating to the period and district.

An attempt has also been made to compare as far as possible the agricultural and other statistics shown on the rolls with those of the present time.

E. POWELL.

INTRODUCTION

The Welsh War of 1282

Of the Welsh wars undertaken by Edward I. the second, which began in a sudden outbreak on Palm Sunday, 21 March, 1282, was a very serious affair, and moreover appears to have taken the King by surprise. The campaign dragged on its weary length with somewhat varying success till the October of the following year, when the last Celtic Prince of Wales suffered the ignominious death of a traitor.

It was to the necessity of obtaining funds for the prosecution of this struggle in Wales that the assessments here printed owe their origin.

The financing of the war was by no means an easy task, as the Treasury was empty and the need of money urgent and immediate. It would seem that at all events at first the King was compelled to have recourse to the merchants of Lucca to enable him to meet his pressing needs, and in order to raise money to repay these advances he despatched in June 1282 John de Kirkeby, Archdeacon of Coventry[1], on a mission throughout the kingdom to raise what money he could by means of a loan.

J. de Kirkeby's Mission

Kirkeby appears to have applied to the towns and the Religious Houses only, the roll of accounts showing the results of his labours being extant[2]. Unfortunately, however, the roll is to some extent incomplete, but it gives amongst others the following quotas paid by the various towns, which are of interest as indicative of their relative wealth.

From a statement at the foot of the detailed roll giving the names of the 87 burgesses who subscribed to the hundred pounds at Ipswich[1], it appears that the money raised there was to be paid over to Bonoruncinus, who was a Lucca merchant and representative of the "Societas Ricardorum"; and from the heading of the enrolled account, which gives the results of Kirkeby's mission, it seems that the whole of his collection went directly into the same hands.

But Kirkeby's efforts did not even suffice to repay the Lucca merchants, and were not able to produce anything like the funds required for the prolonged expenditure of the Welsh campaign, which amounted to over £90,000[2]; to meet this the King had to fall back on various other methods of raising money, of which that which we may call the parliamentary one alone concerns us here.

On November 24th, 1282, the King being then at Rhuddlan, in North Wales, writs were issued to summon two provincial parliaments to consider such business as the King should put before them, or as the writ has it, "ad audiendum et faciendum ea que sibi ex parte nostra faciemus ostendi[3]," and which were to meet in the January following, one at York and the other at Northampton. The result of their deliberations as far as the laity were concerned was a grant of a tax of one thirtieth towards the expenses of the war in Wales, which was to be collected as soon as possible.

No records of what took place at these meetings appear to have been officially preserved, but the important result of their work has luckily been entered by a contemporary scribe in one of the Bury Abbey registers[4], which runs as follows and gives us the form of the grant and the details of the method by which the assessment was to be carried out.

De tricesima totius Anglie concessa Domino Regi Edwardo anno rengni sui undecimo.

Of the thirtieth of the whole of England granted to the Lord King Edward in the eleventh year of his reign.

That is to say, that neither the personal goods of the Earls of Gloucester, Warren, Marshall, Warwick, Lincoln, Joh. Geffard, Renald de Grey, Joh. de Vescy and other great men who are with the king in Wales, nor those of their villeins, shall be taxed at present, but only those of their free tenants. And in the case of those who are with the king and taking his wages, the assessment is to be made and the thirtieth levied.

Also that no tax at present be levied on the goods of Archbishops and Bishops, but on those of their free tenants and villeins the assessment is to be fully made and the thirtieth levied.

Also it is to be noted that to all citizens burgesses men of religion and others who have made an aid to the king before Sir John de Kirkeby an allowance will be made on the thirtieth for such amounts as they have paid in respect of the said aid, if they can show reasonable acquittance for it; but notwithstanding this all their moveable goods will be taxed and valued; nevertheless no goods belonging to men of religion shall be taxed excepting their temporalities.

Also the goods of lepers in places where they are governed by a chief leper are neither to be taxed nor valued, but this is not to be understood of lepers who are governed by Priors or healthy masters. Also that nothing is to be taxed or levied of any man who does not own goods to the amount of half a mark, neither of merchant nor other.

And let it be noted that if after the notice of this grant of a thirtieth any person's goods shall be removed or distrained, strict enquiry is to be made as to whose hands they have come into, and when they are found they are to be taxed and the thirtieth thereof taken as stated above, and what remains is to be taken into the king's hand; therefore let the assessors who are sworn to value goods advise themselves carefully on this point, and if they find any such loyally present his name and the sum of his goods.

When the valuers shall have valued each man's goods according to the form aforesaid, let them at once make their estreats under their seals openly to the chief assessors of each hundred wapentake and of each town, and the sums of all the different kinds of goods of each man openly and distinctly by themselves. Also let it be noted that this taxation must be made according to the certain, right, and true value of every kind of goods that is to be appraised, and let it be noted that the assessors and all employed in this taxation must submit to make an oath, and they are to make oath[1] in this form:

And the clerks who shall write the rolls must make oath to loyally enter the names and surnames and the sums of every man, on whom they will commit no fraud nor take anything of any one by reason of such office by which the king may be a sufferer or other man have damage.

Collectors appointed

The collectors of the tax for the County of Suffolk were John de Mettingham and William de Pakenham, and were appointed in Feb. 1283[1], and it appears that Simon de Dagworth and William de Royngs the Sheriff were associated with them in the work. On the 4th of June 1283 the King, who was then at "Aberconewey in Snauden," sent urgent orders to the collectors that the first half of the collection should be paid in to the Constable of the Tower at the latest by the 8th of July, and the remaining half by the 13th of October following[1], and from the note that the expenses "circa cariagium pecunie" would be allowed it would seem to have been carted up to London in coin of the realm.

[1] Supplementary Pat. Roll, no. 3, P. R. O.

This is the only extant record of the assessment

Since the whole county must doubtless have been taxed on the same principles and by the same methods, it is much to be regretted that the numerous and elaborate returns which must have been made out for the assessment are only now represented by the records of this single hundred and those for the town of Ipswich[1], which are still to be found among the Lay Subsidy Rolls; and an examination of the new calendar of these records shows that no similar assessment rolls for this tax now exist in the Record Office for any other county or hundred.

Assessment of English Counties

There remains, however, a roll[2] which gives the sums total due from each county on account of this tax of one thirtieth and, since the whole kingdom was probably assessed much on the same lines as the hundred dealt with here, this must give us as good an idea of the relative wealth of each county at this period as we can possibly come at.

I therefore print here from this roll a list of the English Counties with the exception of Durham and Cheshire, arranged in order of the amounts due from them for this tax of one thirtieth.

[1] Somewhat similar assessments for Colchester for a later taxation were printed in the Rolls of Parl. Vol. I.

[2] L. T. R. Enrolled Accts Subsidies, no. 4, P. R. O.

The expenses of the collection and delivery of the monies received by the collectors are given under each county; for Suffolk they amounted to the sum of £24, for Norfolk to £50, and for Cambridgeshire to £12, which is about $1\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. on the amount collected. Expenses of Collection

With regard to the enrolled account from which the above items are taken it must be said that it appears from internal evidence not to be quite contemporary with the tax, for there is a statement under Nottinghamshire to the effect that the executors of the will of John de Kirkeby, late Bishop of Ely, owed the collectors a certain sum of money which the Bishop had received. This would place the date of making up this account at least as late as 1290, in which year the Bishop died.

It is perhaps impossible now to explain what the increments shown as being added in the case of fourteen counties really represented; in some cases they seem very large, notably in Surrey, where the increment amounts to more than 100 per cent., and in Wilts., Hants., Somerset and Berkshire they seem very heavy indeed, though in Suffolk they only come to about five per cent. Increments

From the note written on the back of the tax list for Walsham, "Walesham debet crescere blada de quindena S. Michaelis," it would almost seem that after the roll had been sent up to headquarters it had been returned, in order to have the new harvest included, and though this would not have been in accordance with the instructions which gave 20 Jan. as the date of reckoning, this date does not seem always to have been strictly adhered to in the Suffolk assessment, as the tax lists for the three townships of Hopton, Langham, Walsham, are dated at Michaelmas.

Nearly all the returns for the Blackbourne hundred have been to some extent altered by erasures and alterations for the purpose probably of increasing the amounts, but in four of the lists, namely those for Culford, Ingham, Westowe and Wordwell[1], the increments have been given separately and not by erasures and alteration of figures, so that we can see the details. The increments given on table No. 38 as those which were added to the returns made by the Abbey of St Edmundsbury show an increase of about 18 per cent., but this is not wholly in cereals.

The Eastern Counties have on several occasions shown their dislike to the tax collector in unmistakeable ways, but I have not

[1] See notes for these places pp. 80, 85, 93, 94, where the details of the increments are given.

An incident in tax collecting come across any trace of organised resistance to this levy. The Assize Rolls, however, lift the curtain for us for a short time on a very curious little drama enacted at the village of Witnesham in Suffolk, which, as it gives us an interesting glimpse of the manners of the time and of the difficulties and dangers of tax collecting, may, I think, be inserted here.

The two principal characters concerned were William de Clay, in Martlesham, Bailiff of our Lord the King, and Nicholas the son of Reyner, who was lord of the manor of Witnesham as well as parson of the church there, but who, for reasons best known to himself, happened to be in arrears as to the payment of one half of his tax.

These two men were plaintiff and defendant in an action for damages which came up for hearing at the assizes at Bury St Edmunds on 20 March, 1284 (Assize Rolls 825, and 1259, M. 2).

It appears from the pleadings that one fine morning in the autumn of 1283, bailiff William in company with those freemen of the village who had been appointed to assist in the collection of the tax went into the common fields where the cattle were grazing and proceeded to seize four bullocks, the property of Nicholas, in satisfaction of their claim against him for arrears.

Whilst they were thus engaged who should appear on the scene but Nicholas himself cantering gaily along on his palfrey with his hawk (sparvarius) on his hand and valets in attendance, but his attention is soon drawn from partridges to the group of men intent on bullock catching in another part of the field, and shrewdly guessing what business is on foot, he at once hands his hawk to the care of a valet, and rides up to the party of tax collectors and curtly demands of the bailiff what they are about!

The bailiff answers that he is merely making a seizure of cattle on account of arrears of tax under the orders of John de Mettingham and William de Pakenham, who acted on behalf of the King. Nicholas, incensed at losing both his day's sport and his bullocks, loses also his temper and declares roundly that no distress shall be taken on any goods of his, and suiting his action to his words proceeds to rescue his cattle.

Then swords flew out and the trouble began.

In the scuffle that took place we are told that John Fyket, one of the freemen, got a wound on the head from Nicholas, and that the bailiff was knocked down; indeed it appears that Nicholas deliberately put his horse at the latter, and brandishing his sword endeavoured to ride him down ; the bailiff, however, managed to deal his assailant's palfrey a cut on the nose, and by so doing succeeded in escaping the full force of the onset. The wounding of the horse perhaps caused some diversion, for we learn that the bailiff got up, and not liking the look of matters, fled incontinently (cucurrit quantum potuit) to the village, where he rushed into a cottage, barred the doors and windows, and prepared for a siege. Nicholas then forthwith collects his forces and follows to the cottage, smashes in the windows, and then lunges at the bailiff through the opening (fudit de gladio suo versus balliuum), but not being able to get at him to his satisfaction he orders the door to be broken in, which his men begin to do. At this juncture we are told that a certain valet of Nicholas named Roger, being much distressed at his master's folly (contristatus valde de stultitia domini) managed by breaking through some fence to get round to a window at the back of the house and besought the bailiff to surrender to him, lest a worse thing happen (ne deterius contingeret), promising that he would do his utmost to procure his safety. Thinking perhaps that this was his only chance of escape, the bailiff surrenders to Roger on the somewhat illusive conditions indicated, and attempts to go off with him. No sooner were they out, however, than Nicholas swoops down on them, takes the unfortunate man out of Roger's protection, hands him over to a couple of scoundrels (duobus ribaldis) and has him led off into the fields where his labourers were peacefully at work mowing barley. Then comes the most astonishing part of the story, for up comes Nicholas, lord of the manor and parson of the church too, and gives orders to these men one after the other to strike off the bailiff's head ! ("uni post alium ut decollaret predictum Willelmum") ; but these sturdy labourers had no relish for so deadly a harvest, and since none of them would obey (nullo volente) the act of deliberate murder was avoided, for Nicholas seems to have shrunk from dipping his own hands in blood, and to have had to reluctantly content himself with dragging off the wretched bailiff as his prisoner.

On the way, however, we learn that at the urgent entreaty of his friends, and, perhaps, owing to some misgivings of his own or fear that he was in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, he is persuaded to set his prisoner at liberty.

At the trial Nicholas, in his defence, pleads that the bullocks were seized on Church lands (super liberam elemosynam ecclesie) ; he confesses, however, to striking Fyket, a freeman and duly appointed collector, and that too with his naked sword, but states that he really had no objection to paying the tax if he could only find out what it was (quid et quantum), but was merely hesitating because the collectors did their work so badly, and mixed up the goods of his church with his lay belongings.

The jury, however, found that the distress had been made on a lay fee, and that Nicholas was guilty of the charges laid against him (fecit transgressionem predictam valde enormam in contemptu domini Regis): then the curtain falls, and for the rest we have to see as best we can through the mist of centuries.

Hundred of Blackbourne

The hundred of Blackbourne lies to the north-east of Bury St Edmunds, and is bounded on the north by the Little Ouse river which divides it from Norfolk, as a glance at the accompanying map will show, but one cannot look at the map without being at once struck by the very remarkable configuration of the parishes which form the western part of the hundred.

Curious shape of parishes

We find here that no less than nine different parishes all run up to a small extra-parochial place containing some 70 acres, which is known as Rymer point, and which lies about four miles to the south of Thetford on the main road between that place and Bury St Edmunds, and appears from the map to be the highest ground in this part of the hundred. But of the nine parishes thus meeting, one, namely Great Livermere, does not belong to this hundred at all, but reaches up to Rymer point in a long narrow strip from the adjoining hundred of Thedwastry, of which it forms part.

The reasons which may originally have necessitated this remarkable arrangement of parishes are not now very obvious, but the shapes are sufficiently curious to arrest attention.

Two of the old parishes have now no separate existence, Rushworth (now Rushford), which lay partly in Norfolk and partly in Suffolk, having been absorbed as to its latter portion in Euston, and Fakenham Parva having also been merged in the same parish.

The parishes in the eastern portion of the hundred, with the exception of Bardwell, with its long straggling shape, seem of more usual form, and group themselves round Stanton where the hundred court was held[1], and in this parish it seems most of the free lands were held of the hundred, "de hundredo" in contradistinction to those held of the Abbot[1]. In the Domesday Survey this division of the county appeared as the double hundred of Blakeburn and Bradmere, names which are perhaps still to be found perpetuated on the modern map as "Blackburn farm," in the parish of Stanton, and "Broadmere" in the parish of Troston. In the hundred rolls of 1275 the second name does not appear, but "Blakeburn" is said there to answer for two hundreds, and to be worth per annum the sum of eighteen pounds; and we find at the assises in 1285, held by Salamon Roffensis and other itinerant justiciaries, that the double hundred was then represented by the following twenty-four jurymen[2], to whose names I have added their assessment and place of residence, where possible, from the tax lists.

Church property

The tax lists for the hundred contain altogether 1393 entries of holders of property above the limit of half a mark in the thirty-three townships recorded, owning in round numbers property valued at £3780; of these entries fourteen represent the various ecclesiastical corporations who held estates in the hundred, and whose goods amounted in all to £326. 6*s.* 10*d.*, or rather over 8·5 per cent., and of this last sum the Abbot and Convent of St Edmund owned £257. 11*s.* 4*d.*

Lay Owners

Allowing for these and some few holders who are entered in more than one township we have some 1370 lay owners recorded; of these William de Pakenham the justiciary was by far the largest owner in this hundred, being assessed in four places, viz. Thorpe, Ashfield Magna, Norton and Bardwell, at a total valuation of £108. 12*s.* 6*d.* Next to him comes William de Criketot at Ixworth and Ashfield Magna with a total of £49. 19*s.* 0*d.*, and Peter de Thelnetham owning £40 at Thelnetham.

Besides these we have:

5	owners	assessed	between	£30	and	£20
28	,,	,,	,,	£20	,,	£10
95	,,	,,	,,	£10	,,	£5
403	,,	,,	,,	£5	,,	£2

Joint holdings

Among the smaller owners we meet with several instances of the joint possession of goods by two people as that of the two brothers Capellani at Stanton, in which case both names appear, but in some cases where the total effects of one of the partners did not amount to the six and eightpenny limit, which would have brought him on to the tax lists, we are sometimes confronted with the curious entry of the richer partner as the possessor of half a beast, e.g. in the case of Rob. Robehod at Walsham with his $1\frac{1}{2}$ cows, and instances of the same thing occur at Weston, and Hunton as well.

The ordinary trades other than agriculture and stock-raising seem fairly represented in the tax lists, but only on two occasions was any tradesman found to have a stock in trade of which the tax collector could take notice, once at Ashfield Magna where Gilbert Sutor appears as holding a stock of 14 pairs of shoes (sotularia) valued in all at 7*s.* 6*d.*, and once at West Stowe, where Simon Macahard had all the brass ware in his house (omnia vasa enea in domo sua) valued at 6*s.* 8*d.* for taxing purposes.

Of men described as fabri there are fifteen mentioned on the tax list but only one, Galfridus Faber, of Fakenham, who owned property to the amount of £5. 8*s.* 4*d.*, seems to have been of any considerable wealth, their average possessions in corn and livestock working out at £1. 14*s.* 6*d.* per man, while that of the nine carpentarii is somewhat smaller. Judging from the number of websters and textores mentioned the textile trades were represented by five people in the hundred. The fifteen people described as mercatores have an average assessment for the tax of £2. 0*s.* 0*d.*, but the 22 capellani are considerably better off with an average of £3. 7*s.* 1*d.*

The word prepositus (reeve) seems in some cases to have passed into a surname, but taking 16 males of that description their average possession works out at £3. 11*s.* 0*d.* The ten clerici only average £1. 17*s.* 9*d.*, while the three medici, two at Thelnetham, and one at Weston, slightly less, or £1. 15*s.* 0*d.* apiece.

With regard to the status of the people mentioned on the tax lists, it has not been easy to get contemporary evidence, but a certain amount has been forthcoming bearing on the villages of Walsham, Elmswell, Rickinghall, Culford and Coney Weston, which I have printed in the notes for those places; as to Walsham the document is from manorial records, but, though it gives some names one can identify, it is not very helpful since it is impossible to say what names may be concealed under the terms "domus" and "heredes." Status

For the other four villages the lists preserved in one of the Abbey registers and headed "Recogniciones," which were made to Abbot Thomas in 1302, though some 19 years later in date, afford valuable evidence. At Elmswell we can identify at least eight names as those of nativi, and one of them Thomas Prympil appears in the tax list with the highest assessment, after that of the Abbot, in the village, but the average is only a little over 30*s.* per head. At Rickinghall the "Recogniciones" enable us to identify 14 names as those of nativi, with an average assessment of £1. 14*s.* 3*d.*, while four of them have property valued at over £2.

At Culford six at least appear to be nativi, and have an average valuation of £2. 3*s.* 0*d.*, while Adam Prepositus there seems to be much better off at the later date than he was in 1283.

At Coney Weston unfortunately the tax list is missing, but of the names given as of nativi in 1302 five are given as holding land freely there in the return of land tenures of 1280, and other instances of nativi being freeholders, even it would seem in a manor other than that to which they belonged, occur in the return of Land tenure.

At Ixworth all the names on Table 18 of the tax lists, with the exception of the first, would seem from the note at foot to have been nativi belonging to Peter de Chavent, and to have been excused payment on that account.

From the point of view of status a comparison of the two surveys of Rickinghall (cf. pp. 25 and 72) is instructive and interesting. We find in the survey of 1280 for this parish two entries of land held by villani of 324½ and 28 acres respectively, but in the extent of 1302 there appear to be only 38 acres altogether described as held by Custumarii, and 584 held by 65 molmen, a class not specifically mentioned as existing in 1280, but since in that survey the holdings of the villani are given in two separate entries it looks as if at that date there had been some difference of status, which, in 1302, had become more fully developed; and that the villani, who held the 324½ acres in 1280, had not only largely increased their holdings, but had become molmen paying fixed rents in 1302[1]. The optional nature of many of the services shown in the extent is also remarkable.

Animals of the farm defined

For the better understanding of the tax lists I have been at some pains to try and find some more or less contemporary evidence showing exactly what was meant by the various Latin words used in the description of animals of the farm at this date, and the best that I have been able to meet with is contained in the following schedule which is taken from a manuscript in the British Museum[2].

[2] Harl. MS. 1005, fol. 84.

This schedule, as I judge from the writing, was probably written some half century or more later than the date of the tax lists, but it probably embodies the usage prevalent for some time before, and as the manuscript in which it occurs is one of the registers of the Abbey of St Edmundsbury, it undoubtedly refers to East Anglian use.

The tax lists, however, do not always adhere strictly to the above terminology as vituli and bouiculi are stated often to be of the year above that given in the foregoing schedule.

Weights and Measures

The weights and measures of this period are somewhat obscure: there is, however, a document printed in Statutes of the Realm[1] which, though the exact date of it is uncertain, seems probably to belong to the reign of Edward I.; according to this we have the following schedule:

One penny round and unclipped shall weigh 32 dry grains of wheat taken from the middle of the ear,

20 pennies = 1 ounce
12 ounces = 1 pound
8 pounds = 1 gallon of wine
8 gallons = 1 bushel of London, which is one eighth of a quarter.

Bushels compared

Now good specimens of pennies of the reign of Edward I. in the British Museum weigh from 22 to 22·5 modern grains, and if we take the higher weight we get 5400 grains as equivalent to the ancient pound, of which 64 went to their bushel, to compare with our modern pound avoirdupois of 7000 grains, of which 60 go to the statute bushel.

PRICES.

Wheat

Wheat (frumentum) seems to have been grown very generally in the hundred, and it is only when we come to those villages which were on light sandy soils that it is absent from the returns, the places where it is not mentioned being Barnham, Euston, Rushworth, Weststowe and Wordwell. The price varied hardly at all, being 6*s.* per quarter in every place where it is mentioned with a single exception of Wattisfield, where the price was 5*s.* 6*d.* per quarter, and it is not easy to assign any reason for this difference. There is one instance of a price higher than 6*s.*, viz. at Weston where six quarters are valued at 39*s.*, and in the same place we find nine bushels valued at 3*s.*, which is the lowest price recorded.

[1] Vol. I. 204.

Rye — Rye (siligo) was grown in every township which is mentioned, but formed the largest stock only in one, namely at Barnham. The price varied a good deal, and in ten of the returns stood as high as 5*s.* per quarter, but the average price taking all the returns works out at close upon 4*s.* 4*d.* per quarter.

Barley — Barley (ordeum) also was given in every return, and was by far the largest crop grown, being five times as great as that of wheat. The price was 4*s.* per quarter almost universally, though there are some variations at Sapiston; at Ingham, however, there is a considerable exception, as the stock held by the Prior there is valued at close upon 4*s.* 9*d.* per quarter, which seems quite exceptional.

Oats — Oats (avene) were also returned from every township, and in amount form the largest stock after barley in the hundred. There were two kinds, "grosse" and "minute," grown, and though in some cases the sort is mentioned, in many it is not, so that one can only tell from the price which kind is meant. The price of the "grosse" seems to have been usually 2*s.*, while "minute" were valued at 1*s.* 4*d.* per quarter.

Peas — Peas (pise) are almost always valued at 3*s.* per quarter, though some variation occurs at Stanton, and at Hepworth the extraordinary price of 6*s.* per quarter is given, though perhaps this may be some slip of the scribe in 1283. They were mentioned as in stock in every village.

Beans — Beans (fabe) are frequently given with peas, but when given as a separate return they run as high occasionally as 4*s.* per quarter, and the average works out at 3*s.* 1*d.* per quarter.

Horses — There are seven different names under which horses are described in these assessments; of these carectarius designates the most valuable, a kind which appears to have been owned only by the wealthier class of people, the average price working out at 7*s.* 6*d.* per head. The veredes came next in value, with an average price of six shillings, but these only occur in one village, Stowlangtoft, and there are only two of them. The equi vary a good deal, as we find them as high as 13*s.* 4*d.* and 10*s.*, while the average price works out at rather over 5*s.* 3½*d.* The jumentum and equa were probably the same beast, the former averages 3*s.* 6½*d.*, and the latter 3*s.* 5*d.* The stottus and affer both average about 4*s.* 4½*d.* It is to be borne in mind that riding horses (chiuauchure) were excluded from this assessment under the terms of the Act of Parliament.

I do not suppose that the cattle were at all of a high class, for the system of agriculture hardly lent itself to the improvement of stock of any kind, but the bulls are given separately here, there being seven in the district; their average price works out at rather over 3*s.* 9*d.* each, while the oxen (boues), though they vary a good deal in price, average 5*s.* 8*d.* The price of a cow in Hunston was invariably 5*s.* it seems, and in Rickinghall the price was not much below that; but taking the complete return the average works out at just over 3*s.* 11¼*d.* Cattle

There are only four boars returned separately, and they are priced at 3*s.* 11*d.* or just under 1*s.* apiece, while the porci average 10*d.* each. Five villages make no return of pigs at all. Pigs

The sheep appear not to have been valued very carefully as a rule, thus we find the oues in about 20 villages run at 1*s.* each, while at Walsham we find them valued at 7½*d.*, 8*d.*, 8½*d.*, 9*d.*, 10*d.*, and 1*s.*, and at Hunton at 8*d.*, 9*d.*, 10*d.*, and 11*d.* The multo is usually valued at 1*s.* 4*d.*, and sometimes higher, but at Thorp and Bardwell they are priced throughout at 1*s.* each. No rams are mentioned separately. Sheep

Taking the averages through the whole return we find that the prices work out thus:

The value of the sheep lay chiefly in its fleece, and as most of the returns were made in January we need not be surprised to find so little wool mentioned in the returns, as the last year's shearing had probably been sold and moved away. Wool

Of wool as such we only find mention made in two places, at West Stowe where 12 stone are returned valued at 36*s.*, and at Stanton where the value is given as 19*s.*, but no weight stated.

The assessment of the town of Ipswich[1] for this tax shows a considerable amount of wool, but it is not possible to come at the amount exactly inasmuch as the wool is often valued with other goods. We find one man there, Arnald Pelliparius, whose holding of wool was valued as high as £50, and with the other stocks mentioned in the town the total value might probably be about £80, which would represent about 530 stone at the value mentioned at West Stowe of 3*s.* per stone, but the stone, as Professor Thorold Rogers has shown, was a term that varied very much in meaning. The stock at Ipswich

The question of the amount of population resident in country villages at this date is an interesting one, and though the evidences here brought together may not be very conclusive, it is, I think, worth while to see if they can be made to throw any light on the subject. We must bear in mind that the tax lists touch only the "Prodeshummes"[1] or "chief men," whose property exceeded the limit of half a mark, and we must not assume that all the names given represent separate households, though presumably most of them do so, as there are many instances of two or three names apparently of the same family entered consecutively, which may well mean only one household.

The extent of Ashfield[2], which shows clearly the breaking up of the customary holdings and the extent to which joint tenures existed, unfortunately does not mention the number of messuages of the villani which, had it been given, would have afforded an important clue to work with.

Considering the village of Stanton, we find on the tax list here 93 names of males; and the return of land tenure, which however is some three years earlier in date, gives us at least 150 names as representing occupiers of free lands in the parish, but of these ten appear to have been non-resident and ten are women. Of these 130 names 45 occur also on the tax list, so that we have 85 names to add to our 93, giving us, roughly speaking, 180 adult males presumably living in the place. If we assume the number of women to be about the same as that of the men, and the children to have formed a third of the population, we should get a total of some 540 souls; but there must have been a very considerable number of people with whom our records did not concern themselves at all. The return of land tenure mentions 91 messuages besides two held in villeinage and six cottages, and we find in this village the term "terra edificata" used on two occasions, which probably referred to houses of some kind. The census of 1901 shows a population of 778 with 190 inhabited houses.

Turning to the parish of Stowlangtoft we find 27 males recorded on the tax list; and the return of land tenure gives us 63 holders of free lands, of whom seven were probably non-resident and five were women: of the 51 remaining 19 occur in the tax list, so that we have about 60 adult males, who might well represent a population of 180 on the basis of our records. The return of land tenure mentions 30 free messuages, only two or perhaps three held in villeinage, and no cottages. The census of 1901 gave a population here of 158 with 40 inhabited houses.

[1] Cf. p. x. Bishop Stubbs translates this word as "chief men" and "substantial men." Select Charters, p. 386.

[2] Cf. p. 76.

At Wordwell we have 20 names on the tax list, and the return of land tenure mentions seven messuages and three cottages, and messuages for the villani who held 195 acres of whom the number is not stated, but it could hardly be less than 10[1], so that it would seem that here the population must have been considerably larger than the 42 persons with their 10 inhabited houses given in the last census return.

At Walsham we find 90 names on the tax list. The Court Rolls of the principal manor here for this year show a great many names that for one cause or another are recorded, and while several of these occur in the tax list a great many more, roughly speaking about ten times as many, are not found there; but manors in this part of the country hardly ever coincided with the townships.

At Rickinghall if we assume the 32 freeholders, 65 molmen and four customaries of the survey of 1302 to be resident householders we should expect a population exceeding the 381 resident there 600 years later.

In some of the villages such as Ixworth and Elmswell the population in 1283 would seem to have been considerably less than that now existing, but the evidences are not exhaustive enough to be very conclusive.

Comparison 1283 and 1908

To carry out further the idea of a comparison between the rural economy of the time of Edward I. and the present, I applied to His Majesty's Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, and they very kindly have supplied me with a return as for June 1908, giving as far as they can particulars similar to those given on the tax lists; this return will be found printed on p. xxxiii.

The additional information as to the number of owners of live stock, &c., in each parish, which I wished to have, the Board were unable to give, but tell me that the number of persons from whom returns of acreage or live stock (or both) were received for the area indicated was 519.

[1] In a survey at the Manor of Wykes in Bardwell taken about a generation later there were 35 messuages belonging to the 268 acres of customary lands.—Norfolk and Norwich Arch. Soc. Proceedings, Vol. XIV. Cf. Notes, p. 77.

If we examine this return with the analysis of the tax lists on p. xxx. before us we get the following comparison as to live stock and owners:

	In 1283	In 1908
Total head of horses	1408	2368
„ „ „ cattle	5098	3868
„ „ „ sheep	17128	34404
„ „ „ pigs	2121	8274

The number of owners on the tax lists in 1283 was about 1380, while the number of owners in 1908 was only 519.

It must also be borne in mind that the return of 1283 is not exhaustive either of men or live stock, for many a man must have owned perhaps half a dozen sheep, or a cow and a sheep or two, and yet would not have been liable to the tax.

A RETURN AS TO LAND TENURE IN THE HUNDRED OF BLACKBOURNE

In two of the old registers formerly belonging to the Abbey of St Edmundsbury there exists a copy of a return giving details of land tenure in the eight Suffolk hundreds of Hertismere, Babberge, Thedwastre, Thinghow, Blackbourne, Lackford, Cosford, and Risbridge. The earlier of the two registers is now in the University Library at Cambridge[1], and appears to have at least been begun in 1333, while the other is now in the British Museum[2], and may perhaps have been written as late as the beginning of the fifteenth century. The return in both registers is preceded by the following heading, viz., "De itinere Salamonis Roffensis et sociorum suorum anno regni Regis Edwardi filii Henrici XIIII incipiente XV" [1286], but the date here is somewhat misleading, and what its relation to the matter that follows may be is difficult to find out; perhaps it may refer to enrolment, since an examination of the return itself shows that the state of affairs therein indicated was that which existed several years earlier. For in the hundred here printed we find that at Fakenham William Comyn is given as chief lord, who had been dead some three years in 1286, the writ of his Inquisition post mortem being dated in February, 1283; then again, at Walsham, Robert de Valoynes is returned as lord of a manor there, the writ for whose Inquisition is dated in 1282, and we find from the tax lists here printed that his widow Eva was in possession in 1283; also Alice, the widow of William le Blund, appears as lady of the manor at Downham, in the hundred of Lackford, and elsewhere, who was certainly dead in 1282. But the statements under Wordwell put the date still further back, for both here and at Sapiston, Alexander de Wridewelle is entered as holding manors, and it can be shown from a statement in another of the Abbey registers[1] that as early as March, 1280, his widow Agnes had made an agreement with the Abbot as to her dower after her husband's death. But under Lidgate, in the hundred of Risbridge, there is a statement which enables us to date the document, or, at all events, that portion of it, more accurately, for the lord of the manor is there given as John, the son of Henry de Astings, and his age stated as being eighteen years. Now at the Inquisition post mortem of Henry de Hastings, which was made in the fifty-second year of King Henry III., the jury then stated that his son and heir John, who inherited his Lidgate estates, was aged six on the day of St John ante portam latinam in that year, which would be May 6th, 1268, so that he would be eighteen years of age in 1280. It seems then that the return refers to a state of things existing about the eighth year of King Edward I., which is very close to the date of the later of the printed Hundred Rolls[2], such as that for Cambridgeshire, to which it is somewhat similar in form, though lacking in the details of the tenures in villenage so fully given in that survey. From an examination of these registers it seems clear at all events that a return showing the particulars of land tenure with a "quo waranto" enquiry as to various matters was made about this date by the juries of the several hundreds of this county, of which the original is not now to be found, and that what we find preserved in these two Abbey registers is a selection of such parts of it as the Abbey and Convent thought fit to have transcribed for their own purposes.

Date of the return

Nature of the record

Using the copy preserved in the British Museum as my text, I have transcribed and print here all that relates to the Hundred of Blackbourne, since it serves to illustrate the circumstances of many of the people mentioned in the following tax lists, to which it is only about three years anterior in date.

The return here given refers, as might be expected, almost exclusively to the estates of the Abbey at Bury, but the copying scribe has made an exception in giving some particulars of the Valoynes manor at Walsham, which had formed part of the Blund Barony, and which was held in capite of the King, though he has refrained from transcribing similar particulars of the other portions of the same Barony at Ashfield Magna and Ixworth[3].

Is an incomplete one

[1] Add. MS. 7096, fol. 73, Brit. Mus.

[2] The Writ for these is dated 12 March, 1278–9.

[3] From the tax list for this place it would seem that the Valoynes half of the manor had been let to Peter de Chavent.

It is obvious also that he did not feel himself under the obligation of making a full and complete transcript of the record before him, even for those townships where particulars of the Abbey estates are to some extent given, for there is a candid confession of omissions under Livermere, and we sometimes find the words "pro se et tenentibus suis subscriptis" are not followed by any further mention of tenants. In several of the townships in the hundred the Abbey property seems very small, and for the six parishes of Euston, Fakenham parva, Hepworth, Norton, Thelnetham, and Wattisfield, no record at all has here been preserved, since the Abbey appears to have held no estates in them.

It is also to be noted that at Langham and Stowlangtoft the Abbot is said to hold of the King "per seruicium prefatum" and "prescriptum," whereas the service of 40 knights by which the Abbot held his Barony is not given till afterwards under Elmswell, where his residence was, which seems to indicate a different arrangement of the townships in the original survey.

Its historical value

The return, however, as far as it has been preserved for us, is of great interest, as it throws much light on the occupation and ownership of the free lands and the curiously complicated nature of the tenures that existed. An instance at Hopton[1] is instructive, for here we find one John Capellanus, who seems to be the occupier, holding 16 acres for 5*s*. rent of Hugh de Cressingham, but between Hugh and the Abbot, who was the chief lord, there appear no less than three other people who seem to have owned a similar estate in the said land, but as they each paid the same rent that they received, the advantage accruing from their rights is not obvious, and we must doubt if the whole of the transaction has been here revealed.

The return for Stanton

In the case of the township of Stanton, I have found a third copy of the return, similar to that given in the above mentioned manuscripts, preserved in another of the Bury Abbey registers[2], and in the same volume and transcribed by the same scribe is what is obviously the first part of the original return for this village, which for some obscure reason has been omitted in the other two registers, since it begins with a full statement of the Abbey property there and other particulars returned by the jury, and includes word for word the items as given in the other registers as far as their seventh entry and

[1] Cf. p. 27.
[2] Brit. Mus. Add. MS. No. 4699 fol. 5.

then stops. I have printed this in what seems to be its original position under Stanton, with its peculiar heading.

Abbreviations.

In printing this extract I have used the following abbreviations :—

The letter "C" denotes the MS. Ee. III. 60 in Cambridge University Library.

ob. = obolus, in all cases meaning a halfpenny.

q^{ua} = quarterius, in all cases meaning a farthing.

Where initials only occur in the MS. as representing Christian names I have printed them as they stand.

The figures in brackets, thus [228 b], refer to the pencil pagination in Harleian MS. 743.

In reckoning by the score in the MS. the "xx" is put over the top of the figures; I have represented this by a small xx at the side :—

Thus v^{xx} = 100.

EXTENTS OF THE MANORS OF CONEYWESTON, CULFORD, ELMSWELL, AND RICKINGHALL, MADE IN 1302

The foregoing records of land tenure are instructive as they stand, but if we can see the same places in a later stage of development they become much more so, and it happens to be possible to take a look at four of the manors, namely, Coney Weston, Culford, Elmswell, and Rickinghall, after an interval of some two and twenty years, as extents of these were taken before the King's Escheator in the 30th year of Edward I. I have therefore transcribed these later evidences from the Abbey Register in which they occur and print them here.

In all except Elmswell the demesne lands appear to have decreased, but at that place they have been largely increased and divided into two classes. The alteration of the acreage held in villeinage is also remarkable, especially at Rickinghall, where the villani of 1280 seem to have developed into the molmen in 1302. The curiously optional nature of the services here, whether due from freemen, molmen or customaries, is noteworthy, but the arrangements for the ploughing services are difficult to understand.

In these later surveys there are only six freeholders mentioned at Culford and three at Coney Weston, but I take it that those only are considered who held directly from the Abbot, in which case I think they can be made to tally with the earlier surveys, though the language there is not always so clear as one could wish.

[1] The MS. has 'cotag',' possibly a slip for 'cotarii,' and one would have expected 'Item' instead of 'Ideo' at the beginning of the sentence.

NOTES

ASHFIELD MAGNA

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here six do not equal the sums of their items, making the sum at the foot of the column 16*s.* 8*d.* too small.

There are evident traces of another small skin having been sewn to this, part of the thread still remaining; it probably contained the items of W. de Pakenham's property here, which from the note at the foot must have been valued at £9. 12*s.* 6*d.*

The Manor of Ashfield Magna was the chief seat of the Criketot family, to whom it came through the heiress of W. le Blund, and the following extract from the Inquisition post mortem of William de Criketot, taken on the 27th May, 1299[1], will give a fair idea of the estate. The jury stated that he held the Manor of Ashfield of the King in capite by the service of five knight's fees and 17*s.* 4*d.* yearly for Castle Ward at Norwich, and that the manor included :—

A messuage with curtiledge and garden worth yearly ...		5	0
360 acres of arable land at 4*d.* per acre worth yearly	7	0	0	(sic)
108 acres of wood of which the profits are worth yearly ...	2	2	0
1 dovecot worth yearly		6	3
2 windmills, 1 at Fakeresland and 1 at Rusesfeld worth yearly	1	0	0
and that he held also 12 acres of wood of Rad. de Berdewell by the service of 1*s.* 6*d.* worth yearly		3	0

The jury find that Lord W. de Criketot died on May 1, 1299, and that his heir is his son William, aged 23 and more.

There is in this inquisition a full extent of the manor, giving a list of 70 freeholders and 120 villani, the former holding 538 and the latter 554 acres. The extent shows 35 joint tenures among villani consisting of groups of from two to seven holders; but among the freeholders only six such holdings are shown.

In 1901 the population is given at 375 with 80 inhabited houses, and the area as 1548 acres.

ASHFIELD PARVA

This village is now known as Badwell Ash.

There have been a great many erasures and alterations on the tax list for this place and increments have been added, chiefly to cereals. The totals on the right represent the first valuation. I make the sum total after the increments were added amount to £84. 10*s*. 0*d*. and the tax seems to have been levied on £90. Ashfield Parva

On Assize Roll, no. 837, m. 3 (19 Ed. I.), there is a suit recorded between the sons of Stephen de Walsingham concerning lands in Ashfield.

In 1901 the population was given as 356 with 90 inhabited houses, and the area as 1858 acres.

BARDWELL

Of the totals on the right of the tax list here twenty-five are incorrect, making the total at foot £1. 0*s*. 0*d*. too little as it stands. There have been many alterations and additions made on this roll. Bardwell

Henry, son of Nicholas de St Edmund, appears about this time to have unsuccessfully claimed the advowson of this Church against the Prior of Bromholm who stated that he presented Rob. Fulco to the living in the time of Hen. III. (Assize Roll 826, m. 28). The same Henry also brought an important action against Salamon Roffensis the Justiciary (cf. Camden Soc. 3rd Series, Vol. IX. pp. 67—70).

There is a good Extent of the Manor of Wykes in Bardwell, taken about a generation later than this tax, in the time of Richard, son of Henry son of Nicholas de St Edmund, which gives 76 freeholders holding 265 acres and 38 messuages and 49 custumaries holding 267½ acres and 35 messuages (printed by Norf. and Norwich Arch. Soc., Proceedings, Vol. XIV. 43).

In 1901 the population was given as 668 with 167 inhabited houses, and area as 3183 acres.

BARNHAM

Of the totals on the right in the tax list 12 seem to be wrongly added, making the total at foot 10*s*. too small as it stands. Barnham

There is evidence that a small skin which has now disappeared has at one time been sewn on to the side of this, so the list for this place is to some extent incomplete. There are not many erasures on these skins.

John de Ubbeston (Hubston) who appears first on the list was Usher of the King's Chamber, and is mentioned on the Assize Rolls as holding the Manor of Fakenham Aspes in custody for John, son of Will. Comyn (Assize Roll 835 a, and Close Roll, 5 Ed. I., m. 10 d).

Dominus Ed. de Hemegrave, son of Thomas de Hemegrave, was also chief lord of Hengrave and of Tuddenham and held land in Fornham All Saints, Barningham and elsewhere (Harl. MS. 743, fol. 225, 249).

I think that probably the Herbert Bude given here is really the same man as Hervicus Bude given under Livermere Parva; it is not easy to be sure of the contracted names, and in the return on page 36 there is a Herveus Boude given here.

Bartholomew, the son of Reginald mentioned on this tax list, was killed by malefactors in Wordwell about 1286 (Assize Roll 833, 41 d).

In 1901 the population was given at 382 with 97 inhabited houses, and area as 5291 acres.

BARNINGHAM

Barningham

The totals on the right in the tax list here are all correct excepting two, making the total at foot 8*s.* 10*d.* too small as it stands.

The estate which Edmund de Hemegrave inherited here in 1264 from his father Thomas is given at the latter's Inquisition post mortem thus—A messuage and 108 acres arable, 1½ acres meadow, 3½ acres pasture, 51*s.* 8½*d.* rent of assize; whereof the capital messuage and 32 acres were held of John le Sunte, ¼ of a knight's fee of Ralph son of Henry de le Bec, and the residue of Sir Eustace de Berningham, J. de St Claro, Th. de Stagno, J. de Stanton, Stephen Clerk, W. Weld (Cal. of Inq. post mortem, Hen. III., P. R. O.).

The Abbey of Langley here mentioned was in Norfolk.

In 1901 the population was given as 399 with 93 inhabited houses, and area as 1620 acres.

CONEY WESTON

Coney Weston

The tax list for this place is unfortunately now missing from the roll. The amount which the Abbot of Bury paid for his manor here on account of this tax of one thirtieth has however been recorded in one of the Abbey Registers as 36*s.* 2*d.* (Harl. MS. 645, fol. 208 b).

The following is from Harl. MS. 230, fol. 62 b, and is a list of those paying "recogniciones" to Abbot Thomas in 1302, and supplies somewhat similar information as the tax list about 19 years later.

EUSTON

Euston

Of the totals on the right in the tax list five are slightly incorrect making the total at foot 1*s.* 9*d.* too large as it stands.

This parish now includes the Suffolk part of Rushworth and Fakenham Parva.

Ela Countess of Warwick was the daughter of Will. de Longespée Earl of Salisbury. She married firstly, Th. de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, who died in 1242 without issue, secondly, Sir Philip Basset of Wycombe, Bucks., Chief Justiciary, who died 1272 (and at whose inquisition post mortem the following extent was made), and thirdly, William Odingsels, who died in 1294. She died without issue in Feb. 1297 and was buried at Oseney Priory. (G. E. C. Complete Peerage.)

The population in 1901 was given as 257 with 65 inhabited houses, and area as 5410 acres.

FAKENHAM MAGNA

The totals on the right of the tax lists here are all correct. The first entry should read "Abbas de Tyleteye," Tyleteye (Tiltey) being a place in Essex between Dunmow and Thaxted. Fakenham Magna

The Assize roll gives us an account of a fatal accident which took place here. It appears that W. Gernon and J. Scot took their bows and arrows and went out into the fields of Fakenham Aspes to look for deer. They seem to have tried a drive, Gernon and Scot being posted behind trees (stantes ad arbores) to wait for a shot. A deer (damus) came along between them within shot of Gernon who drew his bow and let fly an arrow which, as ill luck would have it, glanced (quodam ramo subleuante) and missing the deer went right through John Scot's body, so that, as the scribe has quaintly put it, "statim obiit."

An Inquisition held by the Sheriff found the death due to an unfortunate accident and Gernon has the King's pardon. (Assize Roll 833, m. 41, 14 Ed. I.)

The population in 1901 was given as 168 with 44 inhabited houses, and area as 1854 acres.

HEPWORTH

The tax list here is in the worst condition of any of the rolls and some items being illegible the sums cannot be tested Hepworth

The population in 1901 was given as 392 with 107 inhabited houses, and area as 1693 acres.

HINDERCLAY

Hinderclay

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here only three are incorrect, making the total at foot too small by 11*s.* 6*d.* The peas and beans here are given so often together that I have put them both in the same column even when given separately.

The population in 1901 was given as 261 with 62 inhabited houses, and area as 1488 acres.

HONINGTON

Honington

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here six are incorrect, causing the total at foot to be £1. 2*s.* 10*d.* too small as it stands.

The population in 1901 was given as 236 with 61 inhabited houses, and area as 1201 acres.

HOPTON

Hopton

Of the totals on the right in the tax list six have slight errors, making the total at foot 2*s.* 8*d.* too large as it stands.

There have been very few alterations on skins 35 a and 36.

Walter de Grancurt was I think of the Norfolk family of the name, and Sheriff of the Counties in 1285 (Assize Roll 835 a).

I do not think that the entries here of Matilda and Basilia "Prepositus" mean that manorial office was held by women, but that the word Prepositus is merely a translation of the English equivalent "Reeve" which had become a surname.

The population in 1901 was given as 488 with 118 inhabited houses, and area as 1397 acres.

HUNSTON

Hunston

Of the totals on the right in the tax list only two are incorrect, making the total at foot 3*s.* 6*d.* too small as it stands.

John de Aula's tax at 3*s.* 11*d.* only, on a valuation of £10. 16*s.* 0*d.*, is quite clear in the manuscript, but should be 7*s.* 2*d.*: while Warinus Sare, Simon Munbery, and Rad. Cokerel each pay 10*d.* too much for their tax.

No increments have been added here, and there is only one erasure on the skin.

Margaret de Aula was the widow of Henry de Berdewell and mother of Radulphus de Berdewell who in an unsuccessful suit against the Prior of Ixworth as to the ownership of the advowson here put forth the following pedigree (Assize Roll 826, m. 20, 14 Ed. I.).

'quidam Brythena' = who presented Martin de Hunterston

Warinus =

William — John — Ralph — Henry =

Ralph plaintiff

The population in 1901 was given as 127 with 29 inhabited houses, and area as 960 acres, being the smallest parish in the hundred.

INGHAM

Ingham

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here seven are incorrect making the total at the foot 5*s.* 7*d.* too small as it stands.

The accounts of the Priors Manor here for the 11th year of Edward I. are extant and show that the receipts for the year were £53. 6*s.* 4½*d.*, and the expenses £44. 7*s.* 9*d.* The receipts from sales include £8. 1*s.* 2*d.* for wheat, £7. 4*s.* 9*d.* for rye, and £1. 6*s.* 7*d.* for barley (Harl. MS. 1005, fol. 276).

Adam de Ingham must have died soon after 1283 leaving a son Solomon and widow Laetitia, as appears from a suit on the Assize Roll (no. 826, m. 32, 14 Ed. I.).

The increments are shown separately on the tax list for this place and are as under:

	Siligo		Ordeum

The population in 1901 was given as 252 with 56 inhabited houses, and area as 1830 acres.

IXWORTH

Ixworth

Of the totals on the right of the tax list here seven are incorrect, making the total of the two tables £1. 3*s.* 9*d.* too large as they stand.

The second table is concerned only with Peter de Chavent and his nativi who were excused paying since Peter himself was with the King in Wales, being Steward of the King's household. He appears to have been summoned to Parliament in 1299 and 1300, as a baron by writ, and to have been at one time Sheriff of Gloucestershire. His Inquisition post mortem was held in 1301.

The following extracts show the official valuations of the undivided estate, on which W. de Criketot and Peter de Chavent paid tax in 1283.

The population in 1901 was given as 856 with 222 inhabited houses, and area as 2304 acres.

KNATTESHALL

Knattes-hall

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here only three are incorrect, making the total at foot 4*s.* 1*d.* too large as it is.

Two quarters of rye here belonging to Margaret de Burnevile are described as "nelus" and valued at 4*s.*, instead of 5*s.*, at which the rest of her rye is valued. Perhaps "nelus" is a French word and connected with nielle=mildew or blight.

The population in 1901 was given as 59 with 15 inhabited houses, and area as 1059 acres.

LANGHAM

Langham

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here only the first is wrong, being 1*d.* too little.

The following note on Lambyn de Langham's tenure here is taken from Harl. MS. 230, fol. 109 b. The date is between 1283—1301.

de Sergantiis Hundredi

Memorandum quod Lambinus de Langham qui fuit tenens Abbatis in Langham et fuit mareschallus domini I. Archiepiscopi Cantuarensis cognouit coram pluribus testimonium inde perhibentibus sicuti iacuit agens in extremis quod tenuit tenementum suum in Langham etc. de Abbate Sancti Edmundi per tale seruicium videlicet quod iret in exercitu Regis in corrodio Abbatis quum Abbas suum seruicium domino Regi faceret cum 1 equo et cum 1 sacco et 1 broche ad differenda victualia et alia plura facienda et iniunxit executoribus suis quod darent domino I. Abbati equum suum quem equitavit meliorem gladium suum et ocreas suas aut xl solidos pro equo dicens quod ea debet Abbas nomine releuii habere. Et ego vidi gladium suum pulcherrimum qui traditus fuit Abbati post mortem eiusdem Lambini per manus domini Willelmi (vicarii?) de Est Malling executoris sui et pro equo suo ocreis et aliis soluit sex marcas argenti. Item sunt plures tenentes in hundredo de Blakeburn de Abbate per consimile seruicium ut idem Lambinus cognouit, ut Robertus le Enginnor et alii.

The population in 1901 was given as 154 with 39 inhabited houses, and area as 969 acres.

LIVERMERE PARVA

Livermere Parva

Of the totals on the right in the tax list three are incorrect, making the total at foot too large as it stands by 4*s*.

Hervicus Bude is probably the same man who is given at Barnham as Herbert Bude.

The population in 1901 was given as 140 with 31 inhabited houses, and area as 1437 acres.

MARKET WESTON

Market Weston

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here 11 appear incorrect, but a few items may be missing owing to the skin having perished at the edges, making the total at foot 4*s*. 6*d*. too small as it is.

Robert son of Rob. Houel claimed a market here "singulis septimanis per diem sabbatis"—Assize Roll 835 a, 10 Ed. I.

On Assize Roll no. 833, 14 Ed. I., skin 42, under the heading "De novis consuetudinibus" we find a statement that Rob. Houel who died took a toll on every bushel of corn that came into the market here, contrary to the custom of the realm, and that his son Rob. Houel uses the same custom. The taking of this toll in the future is then inhibited.

The population in 1901 was given as 235 with 53 inhabited houses, and area as 979 acres.

NORTON

Norton

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here nine are incorrect, but the net result only makes the total at foot 7*d*. too small as it stands.

The population in 1901 was given as 742 with 168 inhabited houses, and area as 2454 acres.

RICKINGHALL INFERIOR

Rickinghall Inferior

Of the totals on the right in the tax lists here four are incorrect, making the total at foot 6*s*. 1*d*. too large as it stands.

The following is taken from Harl. MS. 230, fols. 56, 57, and though somewhat later in date shows the status of several of the people mentioned in the tax list.

Recogniciones facte in Baronia Sancti Edmundi ad opus domini Thome Abbatis ibidem anno regni Regis Edwardi tricesimo (1302).

The population in 1901 was given as 381 with 81 inhabited houses, and area as 1981 acres.

RUSHFORD

Rushford

Of the totals on the right here in the tax list only the two last are incorrect, making the total at foot 3*d.* too large as it is.

This parish has been annexed to Euston as far as its Suffolk portion is concerned.

SAPISTON

Sapiston

Of the totals on the right here in the tax list 12 are incorrect, making the total at foot 2*s.* 2*d.* too large as it stands.

Alexander de Wridwell must have died previously to 19 March 8 Edward I. (1280 N.S.), for on that day his widow Agnes makes an agreement with the Abbot John whereby she is to have the Manor of Sapiston as her dower, which should be by law and custom one-third of Alexander's goods, but as this manor was rather more than that in value, she has to make a compensating payment to the Abbot, who had the custody of the heir, who was Thomas son of Alexander de Welnetham (Add. MS. 7096, fol. 73).

The population in 1901 was given as 211 with 46 inhabited houses, and area 1282 acres.

STANTON

Stanton

Of the totals on the right here in the tax lists five are incorrect, making the total at foot 1*s.* too small as it stands.

The 1844 edition of White's Suffolk says that the Lord of the hundred holds a general yearly court at the Cock Inn, Stanton, according to antient custom, on the Tuesday after the feast of St Faith.

The population in 1901 was given as 778 with 190 inhabited houses, and area as 3319 acres.

STOWLANGTOFT

Stowlangtoft

Of the totals on the right here in the tax list seven are incorrect, making the total at foot £1. 0*s.* 4*d.* too small as it stands.

Sir Reginald Peche was the son of Sir Nicholas by Matilda his wife, daughter and heiress of Rich. de Langtot of Stowlangtoft (Add. MS. 7096, 72, Brit. Mus.). His son and heir Geoffrey performed his homage to the Abbot for three knight's fees in 1303 (Harl. MS. 230, 67).

The population in 1901 was given as 158 with 40 inhabited houses, and area as 1478 acres.

THORPE BY IXWORTH

Thorpe by Ixworth

Of the totals on the right here on the tax lists only three are incorrect, making the total at foot 1*s.* 9*d.* too large as it stands.

Rich. de Bernham and Symon de Gislingham appear as jurors at the Inq. post mortem of Euphemia Comyn of Fakenham in 17 Ed. I.

The names of Walter Kenne and Thos. de la Dale occur twice; they seem to have owned four sheep jointly, apart from their separate holdings.

This is the only township where "Dragetum" occurs.

In 1901 the population was given as 115 with 26 inhabited houses, and area as 1065 acres.

THELNETHAM

Thelnetham

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here eight are incorrect, making the total at foot 10*s.* 9*d.* too small as it stands.

The note at the foot of the tax list here refers I think to the Earl Marshal who was with the King in Wales and who owned the Manor of Kentewell, of which Manor according to Davy[1] a knight's fee in this township was held. Possibly there may have been another skin containing a list of nativi excused taxation, similar to that given at Ixworth for Peter de Chavent, which is now lost.

The population in 1901 was given as 326 with 76 inhabited houses, and area as 1919 acres.

TROSTON

Of the totals on the right here in the tax list only three are incorrect, making the total at the foot 3*s.* 11*d.* too small as it stands. Troston

W. de Thelvetham is possibly the same person who is also assessed at Barnham.

The population in 1901 was given as 235 with 54 inhabited houses, and area 1779 acres.

WALSHAM LE WILLOWS

In the tax lists here, as far as the entry of W. le Fraunceys, the items have been altered as well as the totals on the right. After this entry no items have been altered but increments have been simply added to the totals on the right. I make the sum of the items as they are given to amount to £135. 0*s.* 6*d.*, whereas the sum of the totals on the right is £165. 10*s.* 2*d.* Walsham le Willows

Among the Manorial documents of this Manor is the following rental of about this period:—

Custumarii	Libere tenentes
Domus Kembald	Heredes Iohannis Stroud
Oliver Bercarius	Will. Kembald
Domus Payn	Rob. Kembald
Domus Grennard	Will. de Cranmere
Ioh. le Wodebite	Walt. Osbern
Will. le Wodebite	Domus Spelman
Ioh. Paccard	Heredes Petri Pynfulg
Ioh. et Adam de Angerhale	Will. Denys.
Gilb. Helpe
Gilb. Helpe junior
Ioh. et Pet. Goche
Rad. Isabel
Sarra Frede
Ioh. le Chapman

On the Court Roll for the 18th year of Edward I. is the following entry: Iurati presentant quod Rogerus de Walesham quondam Dominus istius manerii feofauit Iohannem de Walesham et Roysiam uxorem eius de toto isto manerio cum omnibus pertinenciis (cf. also Pedes Finium, 21 Ed. I., no. 13).

[1] Add MS. 19079, fol. 378.

The following "extent" is interesting since it gives the official valuation in 1282 of the estate on which Eva de Valoyns paid her thirtieth to the tax in the following year.

Extract from the Inquisition post mortem of Rob. de Valoynes, for which the Writ was dated at Rothelan 6 Aug., 10 Ed. I.
The jury were :—

Adam Burchard	Herb. de Cranmere
I. Richard	R. Hawys
R. de Aldewode	Rad. le Fraunceys
W. Hulc	Rad. Helewys
Reg. le Suur	Math. Attebrok
H. Patel	W. Bercator.

Who said that R. de Valoyns held in Walsham on the day of his death,

1 messuage	worth per annum		3	0
1 dovecot	,, ,,		5	0
2 windmills	,, ,,	1	13	4
387½ acres arable at 4*d.* per acre	,, ,,	6	9	2
8 acres meadow		1	4	0
49 acres wood			16	0
Rent of Assize of Freeholders and Custumaries		9	2	1
Rent of oats, hens and eggs		1	16	10
Custumary works		4	19	4½
		26	8	9½

All these Robert held of the King in capite together with a certain part of the Manor of Ixworth by the service of half the Barony. The same Robert held in the same town of Walsham 72½ acres arable worth yearly £1 4*s.* 2*d.* at 4*d.* per acre by the service of rendering to the lords of the fees 11*s.* 3*d.* Roysia and Cecilia are his heirs; the said Roysia will be aged two on the feast of All Saints 10 Ed. I., and Cecilia one on about the same date[1].

On Assize Roll 833, m. 42 (1285), the jurors state under the heading "De dominabus" that Eva de Valoynes held the Manor of Walsham in dowry, which was worth £30 per annum, and add "et est in donacione domini regis et est maritanda."

Nicholas Tregoz appears to have taken advantage of this notice, for he became her husband soon after, but she died without issue by him in the 21st year of this reign (cf. Escheator's Inq. Ser. I., Roll I., no. 4, P. R. O.).

[1] Inq. post mortem, Ed. I., file 30, no. 4, P. R. O.

The population was given in 1901 as 1038 with 239 inhabited houses, and area as 2817 acres.

WATTISFIELD

Of the totals on the right here in the tax list only four are incorrect. making the total at foot 2*s.* 1½*d.* too small as it is. Wattisfield

Sir John de St Clare and Berard de Wattisfield are Jurymen for the Liberties of Bury St Edmunds in the year 1275 (Rot. Hund. II. 150).

The population in 1901 was given as 408 with 68 inhabited houses, and area as 1530 acres.

WESTSTOWE

Of the totals on the right in the tax list here five are incorrect, making the total at foot 14*s.* 4*d.* too small as it stands. Weststowe

The increments are shown separately on the tax list for this place and are added as shown below:—
